I agree with the statement provided and have two reasons to support my opinion. The first reason is regarding the eyesight. The screens of the smartphones are small, so staring at this tiny screen for a long time every single day will inevitably deteriorate one's eyesight. The second reason is regarding the cyberbullying. Yes, there were bullying in the past as well. However, the spread of the usage of the smartphones has made them even more malicious and vicious resulting in more kids taking their own lives. I do agree that smartphones have many pros as well, but I believe that when we specifically focus on the teenagers, the cons outweigh them.
